We steadily continued doing recovery exercises. Some days, it seemed like we were making progress, and other days, it seemed like we're completely stuck in place. Amidst this cycle of highs and lows, Reszurre started being a bit more clear with her speech, too, though her memories still haven't returned...

All right, time for today's session.
Sure! I'm ready!
First, try bending the wrist and the elbow...
Th— That's... Magic!
Yeah, erm... Actually ...
I wanted to surprise you... But this... Is the first time I've held your hand...
And uhm...
I'm so happy... That I think I surprised myself instead...
Apparently, Reszurre had gained control of her hand this morning, and she has been practicing channeling magic through it all day. It's only been a month since the surgery, and the pace of her recovery shocked me, but it really just goes to show how much effort Reszurre has put into her daily exercises.
